

Super-New Old Green

Designer Nir Meiri has been considering design consumption these days – how much we consume and how much we chuck out. He likes the idea of “creating a lifestyle in which design is strongly present, alongside the awareness of the environment” and values “recycling, up cycling and locality”. His “New Mexico” range uses readymade clay pots, 3D printed parts and wood – that seems to cover a few bases.

nirmeiri.com

Clouds

The “Cloud” series is a collection of three small occasional tables in various sizes and heights. The Carrara marble tops are buffed to a silky smooth finish, and the turned American white-oak timber legs penetrate the marble to sit flush with the surface, held in place by horizontal circular timber pegs. These tables are exquisitely finished.

mfrag.com

